Excerpt: . . . Starting in 2002, the CSFI will be integrated with the sufficiency, hunger or skipping meals, and coping strategies when food supplies available through usual National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey means were insufficient. One set of questions used a ( NHANES ), as discussed in the section on NHANES. 12-month reference period, while the other used a 30-Current Population Survey ( CPS ) Food day period. Through a statistical modeling process, the Security Supplement 12-month series was used to develop a continuous scale of food insecurity and hunger ( Hamilton et al. , The CPS is a continuing monthly household survey of 7 1997 ). Eighteen questions are used to construct this the U. S. civilian noninstitutionalized population, scale; these questions have been included in annual designed to provide updates of population, CPS-FSS data collection from 1996 through the present. demographic, and labor force data, including uniform national data on employment and unemployment rates. The CPS-FSS also includes questions on program This survey has been conducted by the BLS for over participation ( WIC, FSP, NSLP, and SBP ) and other 50 years. The monthly CPS uses a multiframe, important household characteristics not covered by the 8 multistage stratified random sample of approximately regular monthly CPS. Screening questions are used to 60, 000 households, designed to produce reliable State exclude households with incomes above 185 percent estimates on an annual basis for items in the basic of the poverty level, except for those that indicate monthly questionnaire. The sample is divided...
