Fresh Air Books, United States, 2010. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 226 x 150 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. Love God; Hate Church? Thats the way many contemporary spiritual but not religious types might describe their feeling about faith. Such readers will find a trustworthy companion in Enuma Okoro, a purse-shopping, tea-drinking, colon-cleansing postmodern friend of Jesus who just wants to find a godly man with good hair. But after her fathers unexpected death, her grief seems to morph into the panicky feeling that God wants something more from her, like maybe becoming a nun. As she seeks to unravel those feelings, Enuma Okoro takes us back to the places that formed her, from her first years in church at a parish in Queens, New York, to the years in West Africa where she collected crucifixes along with Richie Rich comic books, to her studies in Europe and the United States. Part Augustine, part Jane Austen with a side of Anne Lamott, Okoro attempts to reconcile her theological understanding of Gods call to community with her painful and disappointing experiences of community in churches where she often felt unseen, pigeon-holed, or out of place. At times snarky and often luminous, laugh-out loud funny and vulnerably poignant, Reluctant Pilgrim is the no-holds-barred account of a woman who prays to savor Gods goodness and never be satisfied; a daring, insightful and deeply moving field guide for the curious, the confused, and the convicted.
