The affair created such a commotion that General Brady of the United States army was put on the alert. His suspicions were aroused, and as a result a new guard was placed over the arsenal. Thus on the day before Windsor was to have been taken and the standard of revolt raised in Canada, the plan collapsed from the want of arms. Strenuous efforts were made to secure them elsewhere; Cleveland and other cities were appealed to but in vain. 1 Again General Handy might say as he did at Fighting Island that the last arrangement was broken up either by treachery or ignorance. 1. Ibid. , 192-195. VII. The Hunters. The association, however, into which all other Patriot organizations were merged because of its purpose; the membership of its lodges; the extent of its resources; the number and variety of its projects; the secrecy with which all its proceedings were conducted, and the vast stretch of territory under its domination, was the Hunter Lodge. The origin of this lodge is attributed partly to the burning of the Caroline;² and partly as a result of General Handys failure to gain a foothold in western Canada by the capture of Fort Malden. This led to a belief that the object for which the Patriots sought might be more readily accomplished in the eastern province by augmenting and assisting the rebellious French Canadians in Lower Canada. 3 The...
